

Domestic Abuse: Why do survivors disengage with statutory support?

Simon Kerss is a criminologist, and Honorary Fellow with the Policing Institute for the Eastern Region (PIER), Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge. He specialises in evaluating agency responses to VAWG and other forms of Serious Violence. He is also an Independent Domestic Homicide Review (DHR) Author, and Home Office-appointed DHR Reader.

For ten years, Simon was the Domestic Abuse and Sexual Violence Partnership Manager for Cambridgeshire and Peterborough. He has also worked in a variety of roles across Children's Services in Suffolk and Cambridgeshire.

In this webinar, Simon will use a range of research evidence to illustrate why survivors of domestic abuse frequently disengage from statutory support, and what social work practitioners can do to help maintain engagement with their service users.

Image courtesy of
Margo Richard (Unlashed)